

Boston's Population

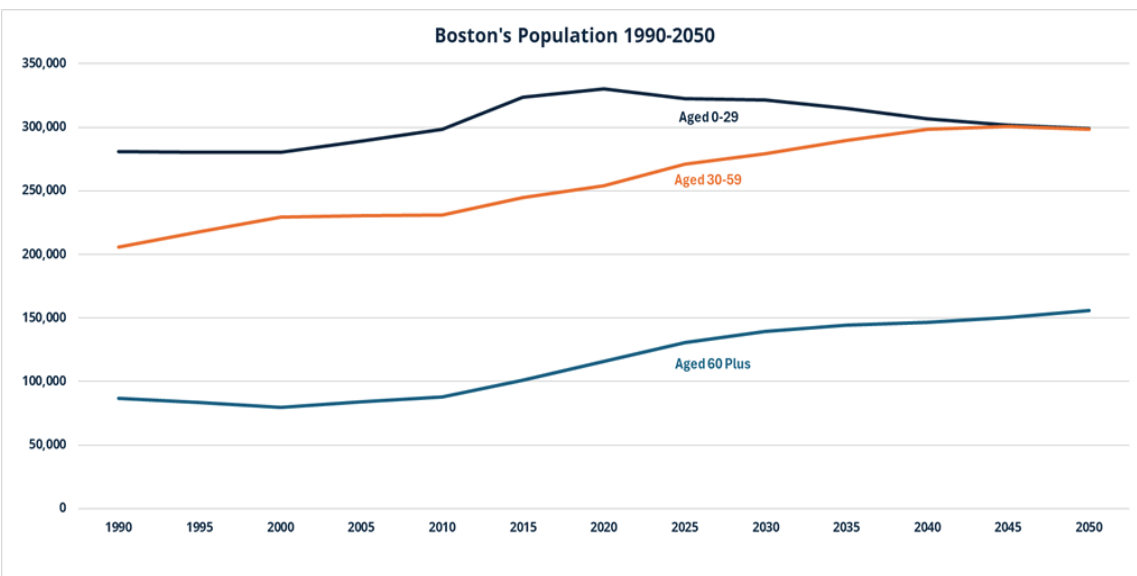

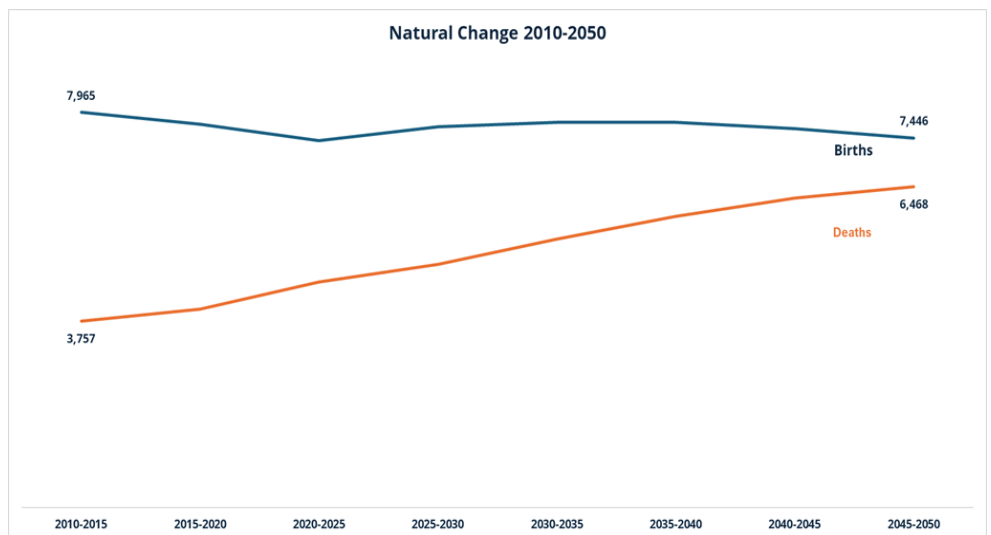

slowing growth 2025-2050

Slowing population growth is a trend that is posing concerns nationally, but it implies unique challenges for Boston's population.

Boston's population growth is currently projected to slow. If international and domestic migration fall, the population may decline.

Boston births are projected to decrease, while deaths are expected to increase. This means that immigration is especially important for population growth.

The 30-59 year-old population is expected to grow, soon equaling the under-30 population.
